Band, Chorus Win Several Music Awards

Take First and Second
Honors in Big State
Contest

A large crowd of relatives and friends accompanied the members of the Wilmet Union Free High School, under the direction of Charles Engle, to Fort Atkinson for the South Eastern Wisconsin Band and Music contests on Friday and Saturday.

The 56 members of the Class C band marched in competitive formation Friday morning with 35 other bands enrolled in the tournament and were awarded a second place in the parade and a second place in the band concert contest and a third for sight reading.

A Cappella Chorus First

A first place rating was given the mixed chorus for its a cappella work and a second to the girls' chorus. This chorus had never been entered in competition before.

Approximately 6,000 students entered the contests this year.

The Union Free High school, which has an enrollment of only 200 students from which to draw the 56 band members and 44 chorus singers, expressed particular gratification over the many honors brought back by the students under the leadership of Engle, who is just completing his first year at Wilmet.

Rep. Kelsey Has Leading Role in Hearings on Relief

Representative Harold D. Kelsey of Barrington, representing Boone, Lake and McHenry counties, will have a leading role Friday when the Joint Legislative committee on Relief and Public Assistance convenes at Chicago for a two-day hearing.

Five senators and seven representatives from various parts of the state comprise the committee which is chaired by Senator T. MacDonough of Macomb.

Proposals to combine all forms of public assistance under the state Department of Public Welfare, with local administration assigned to county welfare boards, have met with spirited opposition from township officials who have testified before the MacDonough committee. Village to Extend Water Mains 1250 Feet on Orchard St.

Board Grants Tavern Licenses; Canvass Vote at
Tuesday Meeting

Plans for the further extension of Antioch's water system were discussed by village trustees when they met in special session Tuesday night to canvass the vote of the recent election and to transact other miscellaneous business including the granting of licenses to taverns before the beginning of the fiscal year today (May 1).

The addition to the water system includes the laying of 1250 feet of 4-in. pipe along Orchard street west and thence south to Lake street. The pipe for the improvement has been ordered, and the work will be done by the village without the spreading of any special assessment, the trustees announced. The financing plan, according to the trustees, will in time prove to be self-liquidating. The cost of the entire job will be borne by the village, but when property owners desire the service connected they will be charged the prorata cost per front foot. The improvement will not only enhance the value of all property along the street, but will offer the additional convenience of "no money down—pay when service is needed."

Permission was granted to Wallace Drom for connecting a private water line to his property on north avenue.

Service extension in the water system last year included 800 feet of main on Harden street, between Victoria and Spafford; 500 feet on Orchard st. west from Main, and there was also completed for Warriner's subdivision about 500 feet of water mains and 500 feet of sewer.

The board accepted the bond of Mrs. Vera Rentner, village treasurer. Tavern license applications were read and licenses were granted to Ralph Thompson, Arthur Dibble, F. M. Nevitt, R. G. Holtz, and J. B. Fields, taverns; Louis Bauer, bowling alleys and beer license; Maurice McKenney, liquor store. Taverns will pay $300 (payable in two installments if desired); beer license, $200 and liquor store (boiled goods only) $150.

Mr. Hopkins, Director

With the battle raging in the Balkans and northern Africa, with London and Berlin being bombed in turn, the American people have been so interested in affairs abroad that the appointment of Harry Hopkins as director and supervisor of the lease-lend bill has caused little comment. American people have become so used to surprises that few things will cause even a tiny shock any more.

Yet the fact is, according to Washington observers, that when the lease-lend bill was being angrily debated in the Senate, had it been announced that Mr. Hopkins would be appointed director of the lease-lend program, the bill's way through Congress would have been much more difficult.

It is not that those who know Mr. Hopkins personally dislike him. The cold fact is that a great many people do not think he is qualified by experience or temperament to get the best results from the lease-lend program.

It will be remembered that before he was taken up by the President and projected into the New Deal arena, his principal experience was gained as social service worker in New York. Since coming to Washington he jumped into the limelight because of the part he played as WPA administrator. It is now generally admitted that the work was handled inefficiently and cost many millions more than it should. Certainly it did not cure the depression. In fact, until the European war broke upon us, we were deeper in the mire than ever.

It is because the record Mr. Hopkins made in administering part of the New Deal program is disappointing, that in many circles he is regarded as by no means the ideal man to take direction of the lease-lend bill. Those who remember him as WPA administrator are by no means reassured. American aid to Great Britain is now regarded as the one thing which will save John Bull from the Nazi juggernaut. Whether this assumption is true or not, it is certain that the appointment of Mr. Hopkins as administrator of the lease-lend law has elicited no enthusiasm outside the left-wing New Deal circles.

Those who know Mr. Hopkins best declare that he has an uncanny ability to read the President's mind and determine just what the President wants done. It may be that this is true, and that the appointment of Mr. Hopkins to administer the lease-lend bill is merely Mr. Roosevelt's way of directing the operations of the act himself. Certainly this seems the most logical reason the President could have had in mind when he made the appointment.

Time to Break a Bad Habit

Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau, in announcing plans for the new 12 billion dollar tax program, has referred to it as "possibly the largest the world has ever known."

The American people have decided that this country must have adequate defense, and they have also indicated a willingness to pay for achieving this national security. Coupled with this, however, they have the right to expect rigid economy in the non-defense operations of government. Actually, the situation at the present time can scarcely be said to meet the public's wishes in this respect.

We will, during the coming fiscal year, spend at least 15 billion dollars for military and naval purposes. Non-military spending will be about as high as in years past, and will take up around 7 billion dollars. In other words, this non-defense spending will consume about 60 per cent of the revenues that the Treasury Department is now scratching its head to raise.

Non-defense spending in recent years has been partly devoted to various purposes which were defined when first initiated as "emergency" in nature. Their proponents declared that these spending measures were necessitated by the depression and its accompanying "bad times."

All are agreed that times are far better at present, and it would therefore seem to follow that some, at least, of these "Emergency" operations could stand a good shoving. With the mounting burden that defense is placing upon the taxpayer, neither his willingness nor his ability to pay should suffer because of wasteful non-defense expenditures which fall in the "habit" rather than the "necessity" category.

VITAMIN NEEDS OF CHICKS ARE HIGH, RESEARCH SHOWS

Ingredients Discovered for Adding Vitamins.

"Because of the rapidity with which the size of a baby chick's body increases, chick rations must have a high vitamin content," reports Dr. H. J. Smith, director of research for Purina Mills.

Dr. Smith states that research at the Purina Laboratories has shown that the vitamins most apt to be lacking in baby chick rations are A, D, and G. Proven ingredients have been discovered for adding these vitamins to a ration to meet the needs of baby chicks.

Dr. H. J. Smith

"Pur-a-tene," Dr. Smith explains, "is a concentrated source of pro-vitamin A. Fish oils supply vitamin D. Pur-Flave supplies not only vitamin G, the filtrate factor (pantothenic acid), but also Vitamin B, which is necessary for the normal development of chicks, and B, which has a great deal to do with metabolism."

"At the Purina Research Laboratories we're constantly studying the vitamin requirements of baby chicks and searching out new methods for meeting these requirements," Dr. Smith reports. "Last year more than 40,000 chicks were used to carry out these tests. After our Laboratories have discovered something that produces better chicks, we take it out to our Experimental Farm for extensive trials to see if it is practical. Then it's not hard for us to decide if this new discovery should be included in our chick starting ration."

In commenting on chick starting rations, Dr. Smith emphasized strongly the importance of giving baby chicks a ration into which the vitamin carriers are so carefully mixed that every thimble-full carries its full share, as that is the amount a baby chick eats daily the first few days of its life.

Training For Defense

By Rufus T. Stroh

Dean, International
Correspondence Schools

It is being demonstrated daily in some plants and factories working on national defense projects that men and women can be taught to do a single part of a skilled mechanical job in a very short time, and that such actions or tasks can be fitted together for mass production with great precision. The answer, then, to the skilled labor problem is subdivision of skills and special training programs.

It is an accepted fact that the training of men and women under the methods described cannot supply such all-around experts as instrument makers, master mechanics, die cutters, aircraft designers, and others. A supply of skilled labor cannot be trained overnight, but we can make great progress by adopting emergency methods.

The government is spending more than $40,000,000 this year in special courses to train workers for defense, and seven Federal agencies are co-operating. Many experts believe, however, that a great portion of the government-sponsored training will be of little use unless employers adopt the "training-within-industry" program. It is here that the skilled labor problem will be solved.

Ambitious men and women have many opportunities in this national emergency. They can hold down single-part production line jobs and prepare by studying in spare time for jobs that demand greater skill. The progress that untrained men and women will make in the days ahead depends entirely upon the aptitude and willingness of the individual.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY School Lesson

THE CHURCH ENLARGING ITS FELLOWSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8:1-8, 14-17, 23.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word."—Acts 8:4.

In a time characterized by materialism and commercialism, it is refreshing to consider the manner in which the early church spread the gospel far and wide. They did this without thought of personal gain or advantage, and with a sacrificial devotion to Christ which caused men and women to be willing to die for Him, and what may sometimes be even harder, to live for Him in the face of persecution. Here was loyalty that puts expediency to shame, and sacrifice of self for Christian principle which needs emphasis in this "soft" age.

The enlarging of the church is revealed by our lesson as being:

I. By Death or by Life (vv. 1-4). Stephen, one of the deacons, "a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost" (8:5), was stoned because of his testimony for Christ. He became the first martyr of the church, leading the line of those noble men and women who down to our own day have been ready to die rather than to deny Christ. The day may not be too far distant when some of us may face that decision. Are we ready?

To every one of us who is a Christian comes the necessity of living for Christ. Some in Jerusalem died (v. 2), some were imprisoned (v. 3), but notice that the others were scattered abroad, like brands from a fire, carrying the message of God's Word. They were not afraid, did not go into hiding, nor did they "adjust" their message to meet the circumstances. They went "everywhere preaching the word."

While persecution may sometimes hinder the spread of the gospel, it also frequently stirs the zeal of God's people to preach and teach. Just now in the midst of the havoc of war and persecution the good news of salvation is spreading in lands which hitherto knew it not. Are you and I doing our part?

II. By Preaching That Brought Joy (vv. 5-8).

Philip, a layman (the first of many great evangelists) and a Jew, went to the despised Samaritans with the gospel, and God so signally blessed his ministry that a great revival broke out and "there was much joy in the city."

What we need is more gospel preaching and teaching. You laymen, please note that you are not to wait for the preacher to do it. Spread the good news yourself. And note too that it is to be preached to all people, even to those whom we might (humanly speaking) be tempted to despise, either by reason of race or position in life. It was a glorious thing that happened to Philip in Samaria. It can happen again, and "it can happen here."

III. By Fellowship That Brought Blessing (vv. 14-17).

When the church at Jerusalem heard what had happened in Samaria, they were overjoyed, and sent two of their leaders, Peter and John, to encourage and counsel with the new converts.

Such fellowship always brings blessing, and in this case it was unusual blessing; namely, the gift of the Holy Spirit. On this occasion God thus gave these new Samaritan believers the blessing and power of the Holy Spirit in such a way as to bind them in fellowship to the church in Jerusalem. Jew and Gentile believers in Christ thus were joined in one communion of love and faith.

IV. By Broadened Vision That Brought Action (v. 25).

Peter and John had completed their work in Samaria and were on their way home to Jerusalem, but what they had seen had given them a new vision. They acted on that vision, and as they passed through the villages of Samaria they "preached the gospel" with joyful hearts. What an interest and stir they must have created!

It is one thing to see an opportunity and a need; it is quite another to do something about it. For that, one needs determination of purpose. As Lloyd George put it, "You cannot fight a winning battle with a retreating mind." These apostles were reaching out for God, and under His leadership and blessing, into the villages of Samaria.

The Christian church needs more real consecrated action; that is, in the name of Christ and for His glory. The business man who conducts his secular affairs with enthusiasm and dispatch, often forgets all that in his church duties. He advertises and seeks new markets for his goods, but is not interested in the outreach of the church. He can get excited about the Rotary Club or the Lions or what not, but never develops the slightest enthusiasm about the Lord's work. It goes without saying that such a "picture" is all out of focus. Let's make it right. Vision? Yes, by all means. But also action for God.

HEALTH HINTS for LIVESTOCK

PREPARED BY AMERICAN FOUNDATION FOR ANIMAL HEALTH

VACCINATION VS. BANG'S DISEASE

Bang's disease (Brucellosis), probably the most costly of all livestock diseases, is doubly important because the germ also causes Undulant Fever of human beings. It is estimated that farmers lose more than a hundred million dollars annually because of Bang's disease in cattle.

For many years control of Bang's disease in cattle has centered around a blood test very similar to that used in detection of human typhoid. Several thousands herds in the United States have been entirely freed from the disease by this so-called test and slaughter method.

After many years of research, government veterinary scientists have perfected a method of vaccinating young calves with a living culture of the Bang's disease germ.

Over a period of six years, 17,000 calves between the ages of 5 and 7 months were given this vaccine. They were from 260 herds where Bang's disease was proved to exist. By 1940 some 5,000 of these vaccinated calves had given birth to three calves with a calving efficiency of 96.2 per cent. Checked by blood tests only 125 or 1.6 per cent of the premature births of calves that occurred among these 5,000 vaccinated animals were due to the Bang germ.

Eminent veterinary authorities point out, however, that calfhood vaccination must not be considered the sole answer to nationwide control of Bang's disease or so-called contagious abortion. In fact, indiscriminate use of the vaccine by those who are unskillful may actually hinder ultimate control of the plague. Farmers considering such vaccination should do so only after consultation with their veterinarian.

Calfhood vaccination by trained veterinarians is a valuable weapon in the fight against Bang's disease.

Most veterinarians believe that the ideal way to approach the Bang's disease problem on the average farm is to combine the heat features of both blood testing of mature cows and preventive vaccination of young calves. Plans are being made in many states where federal and state authorities will supervise the elimination of the disease from herds by a combination of vaccination and testing.

PROPERLY FINISHED BIRDS DEMANDED BY FUSSY HOUSEWIVES

Turkey Authority Offers Suggestions for Feeding Birds to Secure Top Condition.

A well-finished turkey, properly plucked, appeals to particular housewives who are willing to pay for quality, and, according to G. P. Plaisance, manager of the Turkey Department at Purina Mills, it takes good feeding to put good finish and good fleshing on a turkey.

"To fatten turkeys properly, it isn't necessary to bring them in from the range, or wherever grown," Plaisance says. "But it is advisable to change the turkeys to a special fattening ration about four weeks before they are marketed."

"After extensive laboratory tests and feeding trials in our laboratories and at our Experimental Farm, we have developed a special turkey fattening feed to be fed with home grown grains during the four weeks fattening period," Plaisance reports. "It has done an unusually fine job for our turkey customers throughout the country and contains the necessary proteins, minerals, and vitamins turkeys need to make fast, low-cost gains when fed with sound farm grains. It produces a carcass that roasts juicier, more tender, and better flavored than improperly finished birds."

According to Plaisance, this turkey fattening and finishing ration is very easy to feed. It comes in checker form, 3/16 of an inch long in circumference and 1/4 inch long, or just the size a turkey likes to eat. The checkers are placed in the regular feed hoppers, and even on windy days out on the range, there is none of the loss that occurs when meal is fed. Also, he points out, this checker turkey fattening ration is convenient to feed in almost any temperature. There is no freezing in cold weather and no stickiness in warm weather. The checkers do not sour or spoil, making them an extremely sanitary type of feed.

Checkers Are Handy. "At the Purina Experimental Farm we've found this method of fattening both convenient and inexpensive," Plaisance claims. "The checkers and grain are fed in troughs. Plenty of water is kept before the birds at all times."

Editor's note:—The special turkey fattening feed in checker form recommended by Plaisance is stocked by our local Purina dealer for local turkey growers.

"Probation After Death" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 27.

The Golden Text was, "God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his own power" (1 Corinthians 6:14).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils. And she went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept" (Mark 16:7, 10).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "devils" emphasized physical condition after what seemed to be death was followed by his exaltation above all material conditions; and this exaltation explained his ascension, and revealed unmistakably a probationary and progressive state beyond the grave. Jesus was the way; that is, he marked the way for all men" (p. 49).

We bin hearing some derogatory remarks about "women meddling in things" quite frequent-like around the village... but a dear old soul from up Salem says look at what happens when the men-folks have ALL the say about things... like, for instance, that sweet mess over in Europe, and that perfectly wonderful Nazi system that can boast it "has reduced production for civilians to a minimum, so that nothing can interfere with production for war"... and so that nothing can interfere with the turning of Europe into one vast charnel house that will profit no one—not even Germany. It was Mme. Curie's meddling that gave us radium, Florence Nightingale's meddling that gave us the trained nurse, and Clara Barton's that gave us the Red Cross. No, "women's meddling" may not be such a bad thing after all, even if it is a little irritating to the men-folks sometimes, when it rouses them out of their comfortable lethargy.

AMERICAN FOUNDATION FOR ANIMAL HEALTHFARM CLEANUP IS AN AID TO PROFITS

Did you know that if the round worm eggs in the average 40 year-old box lot were as big as hen eggs, they would cover the lot in a pile eight miles high? In other words we must not discount the dollar-robbing abilities of parasites and bacteria simply because they are invisible.

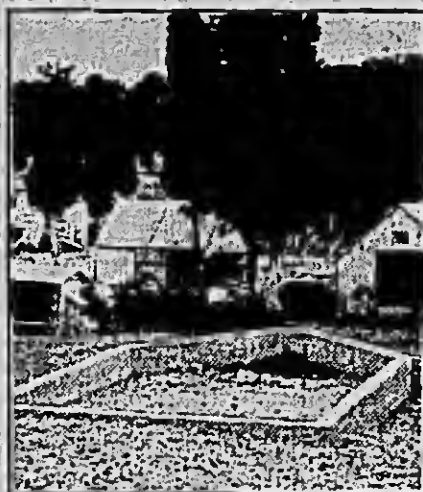

There are a number of steps that every farmer can take to cut down the ravages of animal diseases and parasites. Rotation of animal pastures is just as important as rotating grain fields. Raise young livestock on upland pastures to avoid the worm eggs and bacteria more common to bottom lands that are poorly drained.

Proper disposal of all manure is one of the most important links in farm sanitation. It should be spread on fields not soon grazed by livestock, and plowed under.

Thorough cleaning, sweeping and disinfection of all quarters where young livestock are to be born always pays big dividends. So does filling in mud holes, fencing off springy spots and deep holes and nailing up openings under the floors of farm buildings. Old straw stacks are a common source of horned worms in swine, and should be burned.

The best of all known disinfectants is also the cheapest. This is simply sunshine and lots of it. Millions of dollars are spent each year on non-approved disinfectants. Common lye and aseptized cresol are among the best and cheapest of the chemical disinfectants. Whenever possible they should be used in hot water and followed by a coat of white wash.

A clean hog lot like this pays real dividends in avoidance of swine diseases.

Problems involving farm sanitation are best answered by local veterinarians, for different disease problems often require a different line of approach.

DIFFERENCE WAS COD LIVER OIL

These two groups of chicks were used to test cod liver oil. The chicks on the right were given a sample which turned out to be low in vitamin D, resulting in slow growth and weak legs. The cod liver oil fed to the birds on the left was very high in vitamin D, giving fast growth, big frames, and strong legs. Biological laboratory testing is absolutely essential when selecting cod liver oil for chick rations.

Vocations Conference....

told students of the various fields open for women trained in the field of home economics, emphasizing particularly that the field may often be combined with secretarial work.

Speaking for the field of journalism, Harvey Bowen, of the Lloyd Hollister Printing Company, Winnetka, told of the various journalistic fields and urged that journalistic training was necessary for newspaper work.

L. T. Lease, of the Illinois Institute of Technology of Chicago, addressed students in advancing in electrical work.

John H. Gibson, Divisional Personnel manager of Marshall Field and company, was the speaker for the division on retail salesmanship.

With respect to mechanical trades, Professor John I. Yellott, of the Illinois Institute of Technology, advised boys interested to get training in skilled labor trades, and explained what training might be procured in a technical training school.

Loyal V. Sittler of Lake College of Commerce, Waukegan, discussed the field of accounting and statistics, stating that the field was open to men with training as certified public accountants.

Miss Dorothy Gynn, R. N., of the Norwegian American Hospital, Chicago, spoke to girls interested in the field of nursing. Miss Gynn gave information on the wide field of nursing, and urged that women interested to get their training in accredited schools.

Paul Street, Alumni Executive Secretary of Northern Illinois State Teachers college, explained qualifications necessary in the teaching field and suggested what educational fields had the largest demand.

Harrison Kineahl of the Grand Technical High School of Chicago addressed seniors concerning the field of photography.

Mrs. Iva M. Forrest from the American Academy of Art, Chicago, was the speaker for the group of students interested in commercial art. Mrs. Forrest said that there was a wide variety of fields open in commercial art, and advised those interested to acquire their training in a professional school.

Beauty Culture and Music were the other fields in which conferences were held.

Twenty-five students, with Mr. Austin, traveled by bus from Antioch to Palatine to be benefited by vocations conference. Their names follow:

The vocations conference was considered quite successful in helping students to become acquainted with the several fields which may be adopted as a life work. It is hoped that the conference may be enlarged upon and made an annual affair.

IT'S EASY TO FREE YOUR HOGS OF ROUND WORMS, EXPERT SAYS

Worming Treatment Takes Only a Few Minutes and Is Very Inexpensive.

Remember when you were a kid and swapped knives? "Slight unseen"! Great days were those... swappin' days. And that swappin' experience often comes to mind in the hog business. It's "slight unseen" but a couple of pounds of pork can be swapped for a pig free of worms, ready to make greater gains... and most will agree it's a mighty good swap, too, according to E. H. Hamel, manager of the hog department for Purina Mills.

"It's those large round worms (ascaris) that cause the untold losses to the hog owner," says Hamel. "And it is so easy to eliminate them with the well known, patented water gun, a jaw spreader, and Pigsules containing Oil of Chenopodium.

"Here's all that has to be done—Worm the pigs at ten weeks. Dosage:—For pigs up to 75 pounds in weight, use one Pigsule; for over 75 pounds, two Pigsules. If pigs are unusually wormy, give them an additional Pigsule four or five days later.

Don't Feed Hogs

"Procedure:—Put the pigs to be wormed in a pen. Keep away all food, but not water, for 30 hours. Mark the pigs as fast as they are wormed so that one pig is not wormed twice. After catching the pig, grasp him firmly by the forelegs. Stand him on his hind legs with his back toward you. Two people should work together for best results. Press your knees against the pig's sides to hold him firmly.

"The jaw spreaders should be slipped squarely into the pig's mouth, forcing his mouth open. The water gun which has been filled, and with a Pigsule in its nozzle, is then brought into play. When the pig stops squealing the bulb is gently pressed, which forces the Pigsule over the base of the tongue. As soon as the pig feels the water he will swallow naturally. Don't shove the gun too far down the pig's throat. One bulb full of water will wash down three Pigsules.

"After administering the Pigsules, remove all water until pigs have received a feed of dry oats (whole or ground) about five hours after worming.

Provide Clean Pasture

"Twenty-four hours after worming, remove the pigs to clean pasture, or to quarters that have been thoroughly disinfected with a 3% solution of Creso-fee.

"It's as simple as that," says Hamel. "But here are some things to remember, too. Don't worm hogs that have been treated for Cholera until they have recovered from the effects of the serum. Don't worm diseased hogs. Hogs having Cholera, Necrotic Enteritis or other debilitating diseases are in a weakened condition and should not be treated for worms until the trouble is cleared up. Also, be cautious in worming garbage fed hogs. You know they have less stamina than well fed hogs, and can't stand as high dosage.

"Do a little old-fashioned swappin' this year... a couple of pounds of pork—that's all it will cost, for pigs that are free of worms."

Note:—The water gun, jaw spreader, Pigsules, and Creso-fee recommended in this article are obtainable from our local Purina dealer.

HEALTH HINTS for LIVESTOCK

PREPARED BY AMERICAN FOUNDATION FOR ANIMAL HEALTH

RABIES A THREAT TO ALL LIVESTOCK

Rabies or hydrophobia is without doubt the most dreaded of all the virus diseases affecting animals and man.

Known since ancient times, all warm blooded animals can contract rabies, and death is the inevitable conclusion if infection is positive and symptoms have developed.

Rabies may be of the dumb (paralytic) or the furious (maniacal) type. Cats, foxes, skunks, wolves, coyotes, etc. usually show the furious or biting type, while dogs, the most common sufferers from the disease, may show either the dumb or furious form.

Ever since the immortal Pasteur worked out a rabies vaccine for human beings—the Pasteur treatment—scientists have searched ceaselessly for ways and means of making the vaccine for both man and animals more surely effective, more potent, quicker to act. Their efforts have been richly rewarded, for rabies vaccination has saved countless thousands of human lives, and prevented the disease in untold millions of valued pets.

Very recently another great advance has been accomplished in the manufacture of rabies vaccine. As usual, the vaccine is made from the brains of sheep or goats, processed with glycerine and phenol. However, a method of standardizing the protective strength of each lot of vaccine has been devised through use of white mice as test animals.

By this method a group of mice is vaccinated in the same manner as are dogs, but with a dose according to their body-weight. After a period of days the mice then receive an injection tion of the actual virus or rabies through a half-inch needle directly beneath the membranes covering the brain. Although the test is extremely severe, all of the vaccinated mice must survive and the unvaccinated mice must die of rabies before government inspectors release the vaccine for commercial use. The method is known as the Habel mouse test.

A rabid dog is dangerous to man and beast. Notice the glassy eye and relaxed jaw.

Deaths from rabies are largely avoidable if everyone bitten by an animal suspected of having rabies will immediately report to the family physician. This is equally true of protecting animal life, as livestock bitten by rabid dogs or wild animals can also be protected if proper doses of preventive vaccine are given by the veterinarian soon after exposure.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

By Edward C. Wayne

Germans, Greeks, British, All Suffer Losses in Fierce Balkan Fighting; U. S. Citizens Face Increased Taxes To Aid Paying National Defense Bill

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Like all large government undertakings when there are vast expenditures of public funds, the U. S. defense program is being given an investigation by congressional committees. Pictured here are Sen. Harry Truman of Missouri, senate investigation chairman, and members of his group as they visited the army camp at Fort Meade, Maryland. This was the first of six such camps inspected by this committee.

GREECE:

Nazi Power

The Germans, it was apparent, were able to do in about three or four weeks what Italy had been unable to do in any length of time—beat the embattled Greeks.

The battle of Yugoslavia, which lasted nine days, being over, the Italians contented themselves with pursuing the Greek army of Epirus, only a shell, it is true, of the forces the Greeks had there originally, and which had to withdraw because of the onslaught of the Panzer divisions in the eastern part of the country.

When this army surrendered, it was certain that the end of Greek resistance was in sight. King George II, announcing that he had not been informed of the impending surrender of the western army, fled with his government to Crete, announcing he would continue to direct the offense from there.

But it was apparent that the Greek campaign must be abandoned, and the British must face another Dunkerque or lose their entire manpower on the mainland. The embarkation from Piraeus promised to be even a more difficult task than the flight from France, as German claims of sinking 50,000 tons of transports in one day showed.

Just as the British lost all their artillery and mobile units and the rest of their supplies in the retreat from the low countries, so it also appeared the vastly smaller army in Greece would, nevertheless, suffer the same loss, if, indeed, they were able to get away at all.

Military observers believed, when totaled up, the British disaster in Greece would amount to more from the standpoint of casualties than did the entire British campaign in France. And this they believed in spite of constant reports from London that "lines were holding firm" and that "new defensive positions were being consolidated"—reports circulated even at the moment when the king and government of Greece were in flight, and thousands of Greek soldiers were laying down their arms.

That this was a censorship "smoke screen" to attempt to cover a trial at withdrawal similar to the Dunkerque pattern seemed fairly obvious to most observers.

Central battle in the final debacle occurred at historic Thermopylae Pass, where in ancient times the Greeks had successfully withstood precursors threats to her independence. In fact, most military observers had always maintained that in order to conquer Greece Thermopylae Pass must first be threatened.

However, in ancient times, the pass was narrow indeed—now it was wider, the attackers had fast mobile units to pour into the fray, and the Greek and British rear guard, said the Germans, were totally unable to withstand the advance.

The cloud of censorship hid the facts about the British withdrawal, whether it would be entirely tried through Piraeus, or whether the British forces would retreat through Athens to the Peloponnese, and attempt to fight or debark there.

But certain it was that Greece was doomed, after three to four weeks of furious warfare, warfare in which the Germans suffered their heaviest losses of the war.

Economic Result

Whether it was "whistling going through a churchyard," or a well-considered opinion, "informed experts" at Washington seemed to feel that the Nazi conquest of Greece might be more economically costly than worthwhile.

They said the latest German triumph, on the contrary, might prove costly to the Nazis, for the devastation and physical upset of the population in the Balkans might seriously curtail the flow of supplies Germany had been receiving.

Find U. S. Haven

NEW YORK CITY. — Mrs. Pierre B. Clemenceau, wife of the son of the late Georges Clemenceau, "Tiger" of France, in World War days, is pictured with her son, Paul, leaving La Guardia field after their arrival via Clipper plane from Lisbon. Note the tiny American flag which might be emblematic of the Clemenceau's new haven.

AFRICA:

Blitz Stopped?

There were some dispatches from northern Africa that tended to show that the British had brought the Nazi-Fascist blitz to a standstill after losing practically all the territory gained against Mussolini's men earlier.

Particularly noteworthy was the bombardment of Tripoli by the fleet, an attack at the source of the invading army's supplies. Britain proudly hailed this attack, reported the port was in flames, and practically forced to close.

Whether landing parties would be sent ashore, and the British attempt an invasion at the rear of the German-Italian northern African army was not immediately clear, or whether it was that the British, having found where the opposing forces had landed, were seeking to close the port.

However, it was an offensive note where all had been defense for a long time.

Also, the British garrison at Tobruk was holding out in a long siege, and on top of this defensive note came word that the British had started a new attack on Bardia, some 75 miles to the west of Tobruk, which looked like the beginning of a move to attempt to raise the siege.

The attack, or rather raid, on Bardia, was carried out by a landing party from the fleet, and the party got back to the ships "almost intact" after doing considerable damage, blowing up a bridge, destroying a munitions dump and putting four coast defense guns out of business.

This going ashore and "spiking the guns" was an old tactic of war that now seems out of date, and it was refreshing to read about and to imagine the sneak ashore in the dark in small boats, the rapid move in surprise on the defenders, and the mad flight before dawn to the boats again.

Also it was announced from London that General Wavell had been given an assistant, with the title of deputy commander, Lieut. Gen. Blamey of Australia, who has been in command of the Australian forces. Now, whether this meant that Wavell was about to be removed, or that a bigger situation was to develop in Africa remained to be seen, but it was an interesting announcement, at all events, and meant that something was going on within the organization of an army that had just fled as fast as it had advanced.

The true story of the northern African campaign still was untold and that was increasingly evident.

JAPAN:

Bitter Days

The Japanese, still meeting harsh resistance to their armed effort against the Chinese, and attempting to meet the demands of their new Axis partners that they do something as a military or naval power in the Orient, are meeting bitter days, according to analytical comment.

Instead of being able, through propaganda, to infiltrate with Japanese influence into the Dutch East Indies, that territory is reported to be becoming more hostile than ever to the "new order."

The Dutch, said writers in that territory, have been watching the effect of Japanese influence in China, Korea and Indo-China, and they were said to have lost any interest they might have had in the probabilities of their fate if they should fall into Japanese hands.

Japan still was attempting to reach an economic accord, for instance, with Batavia, in Java; but the Batavians twice have called the whole conference off, only to reopen it later.

The Dutch are said to be angered by the Japanese practice of sending large missions to accomplish a simple task; and the local government feels that these emissaries are actually acting as military spies. This also is true of "tourists" from Japan, who had been filtering into the Dutch East Indies in large numbers.

The shorter the time required to bring pullets into laying the higher the records they make, says Missouri Bulletin 73.

Most birds will not lay until they have attained 90% of their mature weight.

There's a lot of truth in the old saying that a poultryman makes or breaks himself by the way he cares for his pullets from the sixth to twentieth week, but he doesn't find it out until the following winter.

Throughout the growing period, pullets need proteins, minerals, and vitamins to develop properly. Green stuff, grain and insects are not enough. To keep young pullets from being stunted, they need a growing mash like Purina Grower to furnish minerals in proper balance for building large frames; a variety of proteins for making blood, bones, egg organs and muscles; and an abundance of the proper vitamins to make it possible for these proteins and minerals to do their work.

CHECK THE THIEVES THAT TRY TO STEAL POULTRY PROFITS

Lice and Worms Greatly Reduce Chances of Laying Flock Producing on a Profitable Basis.

Seldom does it occur to the poultry raiser that lice and worms are chicken thieves. And they should be treated as such, maintains Crawford Lohrop, head of the sanitation department, Purina Mills.

"If pullets or hens are infested with lice and worms when housed for the winter, the chances of their returning a profit are hurt tremendously," he claims. "Infested birds cannot give the poultryman maximum production during the months of October, November, and December when prices are at their peak, no matter how good their feed is."

Compared with the value of the extra eggs the hens will produce, the cost of cleaning up an infested flock is very small, Lohrop asserts. Only one or two more eggs per hen during the fall will pay for the entire cost of a strict sanitation program.

"A poultryman can follow one of two methods for ridding his flock of worms," he says. "One is to give each bird a gelatin capsule containing tetrachloroethylene, called a Purina Tetsule. Tetrachloroethylene is the drug most frequently recommended by poultry authorities for the removal of large roundworms, known as ascarids, from poultry.

"The other method is to use Purina Check-R-Ton in the mash. Experimental results show that either of these methods is 99 to 95 percent efficient."

Also, according to Lohrop, there are two popularly accepted methods for ridding flocks of lice. One is to treat each bird with an approved house powder that will stick to the skin and kill the lice, like Purina Lice Powder. An easier way of applying this powder is to mix it with road dust or wood ashes placed in a box where the birds will dust, thereby treating themselves.

The second method for controlling lice suggested by Lohrop is to paint the roost poles with an efficient roost paint. This method is commonly used by large flock owners. It is easy and quick, as well as inexpensive. He warns, however, against using a roost paint that blisters the feet, stains the feathers, or that will suffocate the birds. "The efficiency of a roost paint for killing lice depends upon the volatilization of the product, permitting fumes to permeate through the feathers and reach the lice in sufficient volume to kill them," he explains.

ERYSIPELAS OF SWINE A DANGER TO MAN ALSO

For many years swine raisers of Europe have suffered heavy losses from a blood disease of swine called erysipelas, or red sickness, a disease due to the bacillus of swine erysipelas.

Some ten years ago, this trouble appeared in a virulent form in South Dakota. Since then it has spread with surprising rapidity over the hog belt until, by the end of last year, it had been diagnosed in 41 states.

Closely resembling hog cholera, the disease affects swine of all ages but is especially bad in baby pigs and growing shoats. Death losses are not always heavy—perhaps a fifth of the herd in a season—but many of the infected animals become chronic cases and cannot be fed out at a profit. Further, a great many of the pigs which do not die of the disease remain as carriers and may spread the disease to other animals.

One very serious feature of swine erysipelas is that the germ will thrive in the soil of hog lots and pastures. This means that once the disease gains access to a herd, the farm may remain permanently contaminated and losses will occur from year to year.

Arthritis or "big joints" are one of the most common symptoms of the disease. Any herd where pigs show rhy, red ears, sloughing of the ear tips or tails, lameness and enlarged joints should immediately receive a veterinary inspection for erysipelas.

The swine erysipelas germ is a most versatile organism and the disease has been reported in turkeys and lambs as well as in swine. Human beings contracted the disease if they handle the tissues of sick animals and the result is a painful, semi-chronic infection called erysipeloid, affecting the fingers and hands.

A potent curative serum is now available for controlling erysipelas in swine. Also a new experimental method of giving permanent protection through use of serum and cultures of the live germ is being tried in some of the worst infected areas. Veterinarians are doing splendid work in this light to reduce erysipelas losses. Because erysipelas and hog cholera resemble each other so closely, it is important that young pigs be immunized against cholera, so that this disease can be ruled out of the confusing erysipelas and cholera picture.

All pigs bought at sales or shipped long distances should be widely separated from large raised pigs to avoid possible erysipelas outbreaks.

Records Purchased Annually
In 1939 record sales amounted to 60,000,000 and sales of radio phonographs totaled 370,000.
